JOHN HERRON M.P. IN TOWN

The genial face of the member for the Dominion House was seen in Coleman this week. Mr. Herron called on several prominent citizens and sought information for guidance during the coming parliamentary session. The member also spent half days at Lillo, Frank and Bellevue.

MARRIED

Mr. W. H. Chappell, Jr., proprietor of the Bellevue Hardware Co. was married to Miss Annie Irene Millar of Bellevue. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. M. Murray.

The happy couple left on the evening train for eastern points. Miss Enid Millar acted as bridesmaid and Mr. R. Carney supported the groom.

B. N. A. Act Asked To Be Amended

Toronto, Oct. 25.—It is expected as a result of a conference of the provincial representatives here Saturday, the provinces will ask that the British North America Act be so amended that instead of making Quebec the pivotal province no province will be given fewer members than at the time of entering confederation. Other questions will be taken up at future conferences.

Rod and Gun

Big game hunting is to the fore in the October issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont. and sportsmen intending to try their fortunes in the woods this season will find the number particularly attractive. Moose, deer, grizzlies, mountain lions and wolves are all told about and both stories and illustrations are bound to find responsive echoes with all hunters. In each case the experiences related are personal and therefore far more interesting than any imaginary tales. In addition to big game stories there are numerous attractive papers dealing with other phases of outdoor life and both the east and west of Canada receive attention in this way. A finely illustrated account of the Dominion tripehooting meet at Montreal is included. Canadian sportsmen may take up this issue, confident of finding within its pages something to interest them whatever may be their particular inclination in matters of sport. The variety of ground covered is remarkable and probably account for the continued and wide interest aroused by the Magazine in the sporting advantages and possibilities of Canada.

ROAD TO WEST COLEMAN WILL BE BUILT AT ONCE

Superintendent Uren, of the C. P. R. Confers with Board of Trade. Coleman Station to be Enlarged.

A special meeting of the Board of Trade was called by Mayor Cameron on Tuesday morning at 10 a.m. The meeting was called to confer with Messrs. Uren and Sinclair, of the C.P.R. regarding local improvements.

The right of way around the southern part of the bluff was considered. Mr. Uren explained that he had received communications from A. C. Flumerfelt in regard to this matter and this visit of his was due to Mr. Flumerfelt's overtures.

The Board of Trade, through Messrs. Cameron and Graham, asked for the town right of way around the bluff over C. P. R. property. The town would build a substantial road and fence it. The Board of Trade also asked Mr. Uren if the C. P. R. would remove an extra road allowance in the event of the company needing the present right of way.

Mr. Uren took up the question in a business like and reasonable manner. He stated that the company would grant the Board of Trade's request and that a yearly lease would be given to the town at a nominal rental of $1.00 per year.

H. G. Goodeve brought up the question of freight handling. He asked the superintendent for a spur line. Mr. Uren thought that when the present road was completed there would be a complete circuit for freight handlers. This road would be made of cinders and improved on the crossings.

O. E. S. Whiteside brought up the car question. More cars had been supplied this year than ever but still several weeks had been lost.

Councillor Morrison asked if there was a ladies waiting room built. This the superintendent promised to be constructed as soon as the estimate was granted.

Mayor Cameron moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Uren. This was seconded by J. M. Scott.

Mr. Uren in reply stated that he believed in doing all he could that was reasonable and that if any improvements were needed, it would facilitate matters by first appealing to the district superintendent.

HAPPENINGS AROUND COLEMAN

L. A. Manly is in Grand Forks B. C. on a business visit.

J. Scott, master mechanic, is seriously ill with rheumatic fever.

COLEMAN'S COMMERCIAL STATUS

The decision of the C. P. R. to grant a right of way to the town of Coleman for a road to West Coleman is another step towards the goal of commercial success. The necessity for greater freight facilities and waiting room accommodation is a plain indication of our growth. Our position as the commercial metropolis cannot be assailed or questioned.

Coleman stands to-day fourth in the list of Albertan cities in point of export tonnage. Consideration of her demands by the pioneer railway company of the West, is imperative. This great corporation which has assisted so much in the development of the West, listen with no deaf ear, when a rising town outgrows its present inadequate facilities. This great corporation answers the call of the commercial siren. It unmistakably believes in Coleman's commercial importance in the Pass.

Coleman is rapidly changing from year to year. To-day miles of switches and sidings are discernable. Two tipplers handle export trade over 3000 tons daily. Industries desiring cheap fuel for their successful production can find that industries can be produced in Coleman at a cost which is minimum for any province of Canada. Coleman is growing.

ATHLETIC WORLD

The October number of the Athletic World, which has just reached us, a pronounced improvement in every department over past issues, its coast to coast treatment of the big things in the sphere of Canadian and universal sports is exhaustive and timely, its illustrations must be seen to be appreciated.

Coleman Will Celebrate Thanksgiving Day

Every arrangement for Coleman's great celebration on Thanksgiving Day has been completed. The school children will parade at 2 o'clock headed by the Coleman Band.

In the evening speakers from outside municipalities will address the meeting.

Afterwards a well prepared program will be rendered. The evening will be closed by an informal civic ball.

THE CLOCK TICKED

So-called Bad Lands Are Valuable, Says a Colonial.

In maps of Australia published only a few years ago, may be found vast tracts of territory described as deserts. Victoria Desert, in the southern part of Western Australia, and the Great Sandy Desert, in the north of the province, are two of the most notable of these titanic waste lands.

DESERTS OF AUSTRALIA.

So-called Bad Lands Are Valuable, Says a Colonial.

Old maps of the continent that is now a Commonwealth show "deserts" almost everywhere inland—an easy way of describing land which was almost unexplored. But that, of course, is not the case with Western Australia. The Victoria Desert has been traversed several times since 1875 when Giles made his great journey across it from west to east. This Great Sandy Desert has also been crossed on several occasions. The expeditions of Giles, Warburton, and Carnegie afforded no evidence that this great wilderness was other than a desert.

To those who suffer sickness, to those who want to be well, we say let us buy a 50-cent bottle of Psychine from your druggist and give it to you free to prove.

The white corpuscles of the blood—leucocytes, as they are known scientifically—are the policemen or scavengers of the body. Not a germ of disease can invade the body anywhere but these white corpuscles get after it. And, if they are strong enough or in sufficient numbers, they devour it. If they're not strong enough or in sufficient numbers, then the invading army of disease germs triumphs and disease holds the body.

And it is the tremendous curative power of these herbs that is responsible for the unequalled record of this splendid preparation. Think of it. In Psychine we have a preparation that has been in use a third of a century. That has cured hundreds of thousands of many kinds of diseases.

We will undoubtedly buy and distribute in this manner hundreds of thousands of these 50-cent bottles of Psychine. And we do that to show our entire confidence in this wonderful preparation. A confidence that has been based on our third of a century's experience with this splendid preparation with a full knowledge of the hundreds of thousands of cures it has made.

Mrs. James Fenwick
Enterprise, Ont., October 1st, 1908.
I suffered tortures for seven long years from a Water Tumor. I was forced to take morphine constantly to relieve the pain, and I wanted to die to get relief. The doctor gave me up and my friends hourly expected my death. Then I was induced to take "Fruit-a-Live" and this wonderful fruit medicine has completely cured me. When I appeared on the street again my friends exclaimed "The dead has come to life." The cure was a positive miracle. MRS. JAMES FENWICK, age 40—Box 6—for $4.50 or trial box. Why Suffer From Piles?

Zam-Buk Gives Certain Ease.

Friction on the veins (the hemorrhoid veins) that are swollen, inflamed and gorged with blood, is what causes the terrible pain and stinging and smarting of piles. Zam-Buk applied at night will be found to give ease before morning. Thousands of persons have proved this. Why not be guided by the experience of others? Mr. Thomas Pearson, of Prince Albert, Sask., writes: "I must thank you for the benefit I have received from the use of Zam-Buk. Last summer I suffered greatly from piles. I started to use Zam-Buk and found it gave me relief. I continued it and after using three or four boxes I am pleased to say it has effected a complete cure."

Mr. G. A. Dufresne, 153-155 St. Joseph Street, St. Roch, Quebec, P.Q., writes: "I have highly recommended Zam-Buk to anyone who suffers from piles." Magistrate Sanford, of Weston, King's Co., N.S., says: "I suffered long from itching piles, but Zam-Buk has now cured me." Mr. William Kenney, of Upper Nine Mile River, Hants Co., N.S., says: "I suffered terribly from piles, the pain at times was almost unbearable. I tried various ointments, but every thing I tried failed to do me the slightest good. I was about to try various remedies, when I heard of Zam-Buk, and thought as a last resource I would give this balm a trial. I procured a supply and commenced with the treatment. After a very short time Zam-Buk effected a cure. Several other ointments and medicines had failed to do a complete cure." Zam-Buk cures skin eruptions, eczema, ulcers, varicose veins, cuts, burns, bruises, chaps, cold sores, etc. Ask a box of druggists and grocers, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful imitations.

Give Baby a Chance.

Don't dose the baby with soothing mixtures and narcotics—they were never known to help any baby. You might just as well dose the grown up man or woman with opium or cocaine—the result would be the same: a permanent injury to mind and body. When baby is ill give him a medicine that will cure a medicine free from injurious drugs. Such a medicine is Baby's Own Tablets. They are baby's greatest friend. They never do any harm. They cure. Concerning them Mrs. Richard Mulloy, Lanigan, Sask., writes: "Baby's Own Tablets saved my baby's life. We gave them to our baby when he was teething and kept him good natured and healthy." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at the box from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

They must be taken according to directions and used steadily and they will speedily give evidence of their beneficial effects.

Ma—"Well, Aaron, it is little Abby's birthday tomorrow. Vat are you going to give him for a present?" Pa—"If he's a very good boy I'll have the front windows cleaned and let him look at the trains going by."

There is, however, at present visiting the Old Country a gentleman who has acquired the title of a "l'ill'ou" description.

He has spent seventeen years in the "Old Country," he has made much exploration work, and for the last four years he has been engaged in important missions on behalf of the Government of the Colony. In Sir George Reid's opinion, Mr. Canning (the gentleman referred to), is better acquainted with the northern parts of Australia than anybody he has met, and this is a sufficient testimony to Mr. Canning's knowledge that he is talking about.

Two months ago, Mr. Canning successfully completed the enterprise which the Government entrusted to him of constructing a line of wells from Wiluna, a little mining town, to the Kimberley country in the north, a distance of 800 miles. This scheme was decided upon as a result of a journey made in 1906. The possibility of finding water in the desert has long been discussed, and it was his business to discover it. After having spent twelve months on a journey of 1,000 miles, he was able to report that abundant water was available.

"There is water almost everywhere in this so-called desert," added Mr. Canning, "and I have found it very near the surface. The average depth of the wells we constructed, one every fourteen miles, is only 35 feet. The water is held in a fair store of water. There is not one which would not yield an ample supply for two or three months. A 'moor' being anything between 300 and 500 head. Some of the wells give over 4,000 gallons an hour. Each of these is timbered and supplied with 42 feet of troughing."

"We brought back cattle with us from the States to Wiluna without losing a single bullock, and they were all in good killing condition. The cattle are doing very well. It is to open up a new route to the finest pastoral country in Australia. There are 500,000 acres of land in Northern Australia, with a population of about 1,000 divided between a few large stations. I maintain that Northern Australia is absolutely a white man's country. Most of it is a tableland about 1,500 feet above the sea. It is perfectly healthy, for though there is a rainy season and the summer is hot, the heat is not excessive, and the winter is perfect. The climate is suitable for tropical and sub-tropical crops, as well as for stock raising. Wheat, cotton, rice, and sugar could be grown there. The country is clamoring for population—there is no doubt about that, and it ought to get it even before the railway is built."

Out of Practice.

The spectacle of King George bringing his navy into harbors at Torbay the other day recalls an amusing incident that happened some years ago. He was witnessing some naval operations from an armored cruiser, and expressed a desire to the captain to be allowed to handle the ship himself for a short time. A ready assent was, of course, at once forthcoming, and the prince of Wales, as his present majesty then was—took temporary command. No sooner had he done so than his ship began to lose her station. He tried to signal the flagstaff at once signalled to know what was the matter, and humorously added that if he were desired a midshipman should be lent to him to enable them to keep their proper station. The prince was then signalled to ask for them to be read to him. When this was done he laughed heartily, and at once read the following reply to be sent: "Please forgive mistakes; am rather short of practice—George."

An Amazing Memory.

Sir Albert de Ruizen, the London magistrate, who presided over the Crippen case, has an amazing memory. On one occasion a prisoner, thinking to get off with a light sentence, said that he had never appeared in the dock before. The magistrate, however, refreshed his memory with the remark that they had met in similar circumstances many years before. "If a man had murdered the discomfited one, amidst a storm of laughter from the court," he said. "In spite of his advanced age Sir Albert is still in the physical condition, thanks to his athletic disposition. He rowed for Cambridge as young as 16, Lord Justice Chitty being in the opposing Oxford crew."

Then the Alder-Camp Grinned. Unconventional to a degree, the Countess of Glasgow, who is taking a well-earned rest after the trying illness of her son, once had a quaint experience with almost overbearing her own ideas of simplicity. It happened soon after the earl was made Governor of New Zealand, in the presence of Lord Onslow. An aide-de-camp was dispatched with a verbal invitation to a very appointed Minister, who over his position rather to natural abilities than to any advantageous advantages in the way of birth or training. With a grin the aide-de-camp gave her ladyship the Minister's reply: "Much obliged, but I and the missus don't meal out."

Any preparation that strengthens these white corpuscles or that increases their number, will not only preserve health, but will build up its defenses so strongly that contagion or infection are impossible.

Herbs have always been great curative agents from time immemorial. They have been styled nature's own remedies.

Certain herbs more than others are noted for their curative powers.

And it has been found that those herbs that are most effective in maintaining or restoring health, do so by building up the white corpuscles or Phagocytes.

These herbs are incorporated in Psychine.

MacKenzie and Mann deny that they will take over the A. G. W. railways. What is there to take over?

In Superintendent Uren the C. P. R. have a capable official, one who makes friends for the company.

The ratepayers of Coleman can thank the Board of Trade for the successful completion of the road question.

There being no murder trial or council meeting, we have nothing much to talk about in Coleman.

The Miner is not responsible for the opinions of its competitors. Neither are the editors of our competitor's publication. The goods come in tin cans.

The Blairmore Oddfellows have come to, after a strenuous initiation by Coleman. It is said that the goat refused to kick when W. J. Bartlett was on the carpet. It evidently thought he was a great kid.

Fernie could not be induced to part with her cabinet representative. It would not be irony to say that the "Pittsburg of the Pass" will steal honors belonging to the older Pennsylvania town.

Applications will be received by Coleman for the following: Steam Laundry, Brick Works, Iron Foundry and Steel Works, all or any not necessarily refused.

We announce to the Pass local readers that the man who wrote "Breathes there a man with soul so dead" is now dead and has been as dead as a worn out thought for two hundred years.

For Thanksgiving Day, October 31, 1910, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company are authorizing a rate of fare and one-third for the round trip. Tickets will be on sale, October 28th, to 31st inclusive, final return limit, November 2nd, 1910.

Campaign Closes

The last meeting of the evangelistic campaign was held on Thursday evening. After the usual service a social hour was spent. Refreshments were served and words of appreciation spoken by minister and workers. Words of farewell were given by Rev. A. C. Wishart and Mr. McBreney. The evening was a most enjoyable one. The missionaries left for Trail B. C. on Friday morning.

CANADIAN NORTHERN TO TAKE OVER THE A. & G. W.

Edmonton, Oct. 24.—That the Canadian Northern interests are going to take over and build the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway, that stormy petrel of Alberta politics is again confirmed by the fact that several parties of surveyors have been sent out in the north country by the McKenzie and Mann Company. Those surveyors are going over the route outlined in the plans of the Great waterways Railway. They are evidently engaged in estimating the probable cost of construction of the line, and the best and most direct route of Fort McMurray. According to settlers living in that district who have had conversation with members of the survey party, there is little reason to doubt but that the Canadian Northern will build the line for the Provincial Government or else operate it on a long term lease. Since Premier Sifton has been in office he has had several conferences with Messrs. MacKenzie and Mann, and also with Stewart of the firm of Foley Welch and Stewart, who have done a lot of contracting for the Canadian Northern. It is expected that further developments will prove conclusively that the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway will become virtually a branch line of the Canadian Northern Railway.

A number of Frank's business men have requested the editor of the Miner to establish a paper in town. Frank is a growing town and a live weekly would command support.

London, Oct. 27.—The appeal in the Crippen case has been lodged with the registrar of the court of criminal appeal. The case is likely to be heard a fortnight hence.

FIRE PROTECTION

The annual report of the Superintendent of Forestry, which forms part of the annual report of the Department of the Interior, lately issued, shows that the Dominion Forest Service is year by year enlarging its staff of fire-fighters and steadily getting into better shape its means of protecting the public forest within its jurisdiction.

During the year 1909 the number of fire rangers employed was 96, as against 47 during previous year. Nearly half of these (45, to wit) were employed in patrolling the Rocky Mountain country from the International boundary up to the Peace, Athabasca and Lesser Slave regions. The Railway Belt in British Columbia was guarded by 37 rangers, while in Saskatchewan 14 were employed. As in most previous years the largest number of fires—those, at least, whose cause were known—arose from the building and operation of railways. Next to these settlers clearing land and burning brush were most culpable, while campers and travellers were also to blame for a very large proportion of the fires.

Constant patrolling of all places where danger exists is the chief means taken for the prevention of fires. As opportunity offers, this is supplemented, especially on the forest reserves, the comparatively limited areas of which give better opportunities for careful fire protection. On Shuswap Lake, B. C. for instance, a gasoline launch is used, which serves not only to enable the ranger to cover his beat more quickly in case of serious fire would prove invaluable in getting men and supplies to the scene of the fire expeditiously. On the forest reserves fire guards are made along the boundaries and along the lines of railway passing through the reserves. Some of these guards are made by burning the grass and other herbage at the season when the snow has disappeared from the surrounding cultivated districts and before it has gone from the forest, so that there is no danger to the latter. Ploughed guards are also made in the reserves, which not only make it possible to get men to a fire more quickly in order to fight it, but also serve to stop small fires and in case of larger fires give a base from which to "backfire."

Special attention has also been given to the problem presented by fires arising from the construction and operation of railways. The patrol along the route of the G. T. P. during its construction west of Edmonton has been very successful. During the two years of construction work not one serious fire has occurred along the right-of-way. The prevention of fires along the railway due to sparks from engines is another very serious matter. In some places in the forest reserves the railways have been compelled to make "guards" along their right-of-way. Efforts are also being made to get the railways to clear up the brush from their lines. One western railway this spring had a fire arising from the neglect to follow the instructions of the branch in this regard and lost several miles of valuable timber through the fire which started from brush along their track having been ignited by fire from an engine.

During the year reported on a complaint was laid against the Great Northern Railway for starting fires along its lines in British Columbia. The Railway Commission has also been requested to give authority to officers of the fire ranging staff to examine locomotives at divisional points in order to see that they have the equipment required by law in the shape of spark-arresters, etc.

Burton's Luck

He Rode on the Back of an Angry Bull.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyright, 1926, by American Press Association.

Anne filled a harmless looking white parrot that developed a bright red lining.

Neal Burton glanced at the way good reflected on the girl's softly rounded cheek and met her inquiring eyes.

"How much farther to the river, Neal?" she asked hastily.

"As if you didn't know," he retorted. "You must have been there three times with Fuller. You needn't be afraid I'm going to propose to you again."

"I don't wish you to!"

"You're made that very plain on three different occasions. I may look at you sometimes, may I not, without intending to throw myself at your feet and plead for a crumb of affection?"

His bitter sarcasm stung Anne to foolish retort.

"It would make me most uncomfortable if you did, as I haven't even a crumb to spare."

Neal winced. "I don't wish a crumb, Anne. It's all or nothing as far as I'm concerned."

"To worry it must be nothing, then."

In the adjoining pasture a sleek dark form leisurely approached a break in the fence.

The young man, eager for keener torture to allay the dull ache of his heart, spoke again jealously.

"Of course I'm so horny handed son of the soil; I don't mangle the king's English nor talk with a twang and eat starchy buckwheat cakes for breakfast, winter and summer; I can't milk a cow, and I don't know the best soil in which to produce giant turnips. I do know the estate business from the ground up, and I can run a motor car. These are my limitations. Speaking of Nathan Fuller—"

"We were not speaking of him," interrupted Anne coldly.

Again silence. The dark form panned in the opening of the broken fence with uplifted head.

"Are you going to that barn dance tonight?" asked Neal after awhile.

"Yes."

"You told me when I asked you to go that you didn't care for that sort of thing."

"I changed my mind. I thought it would be rather fun to go."

The country people. Their ways are so different to me that everything seems so new and so interesting to me. It is such a pleasant, simple life."

"The natives won't enjoy themselves much with a lot of giggling city boarders looking on. I suppose the country people at the farmhouse are going!"

"I hardly think so. Mr. Fuller invited me to go. I'm going to drive over in the buggy with him." Anne blushed deep with embarrassment under Neal's sharp gaze. "Don't look at me like that, Neal Burton," she added sharply. "Nathan Fuller is a fine fellow, and he saved my life. I might have drowned if he had not happened along the river when my boat upset. You may laugh at him for a countryman, but I would like to see you do a deed like that!"

"It is not my luck to have the opportunity," returned Neal, his face curiously white. "I understand what you mean, Anne. I'm just a plain, master of fact sort of chap, the sort you've always known, and you're tired of my type. If I may be permitted to express the opinion—I trust Fuller will not misunderstand your 'gratitude' for something warmer."

Anne made no reply. Her blue eyes were fixed on the shivering river which they were approaching.

Suddenly Burton tore the red lined parasol from her light grasp and clutched her arm.

"Run, Anne! Run for the willow trees and climb! It's a bull! I'll keep him off! Run, I tell you!" He pushed her toward the river, but she turned and clung to him with a little cry of alarm.

With a despairing gesture he tossed the red lined parasol toward the approaching beast and saw it whirl along, its crimson silk tail due in the face of the animal. Then he grasped Anne's arm and raced with her across the intervening space toward the willows.

Behind them the bull was trampling the tantalizing muskade into crumbled fragments. His angry bellow announced that his flinch had been discovered, and, with amazing celerity in so clumsy a beast, he had turned and came after them.

Neal fairly tossed Anne's slight form up into the low hanging branches, where she clung desperately. That he was able to reach her side and throw his arm about her, was an amazing feat, considering his awkward, awkward build. As he braced himself against the flaccid trunk, his feet secure in a momentary crook below, the following animal struck the willow tree like a whirlwind.

As they rocked dizzily with the swaying tree Anne clung closely to Burton's shoulder, into which her face was pressed. Her eyes, wide open, stared down at her belt, while the bull repeatedly charged the tree trunk with most unsatisfactory results. Presently he desisted from the attack, and his angry bellow diminished to a low growl, like distant thunder. It was quite evident that he intended to wait for their descent from the tree. He took up his position beneath the cool shade and waited.

Anne lifted a shamed face. "Has he gone, Neal?" she asked meekly.

"No, he's down there waiting. Perhaps he'll get tired after awhile and go back to his pasture."

"Can't you find a branch for me to sit on?" inquired Anne from her position, supported by Neal's willing arm.

"I'm afraid not, but you can take this place over," said Neal, leaning against the trunk and brace your feet here. Hold tight to this little branch, on either side."

"Where are you going to stay?" asked Anne uneasily. "I've driven you from the only safe position, only you see—I couldn't!" She paused helplessly.

"Of course you couldn't," returned Neal. "You shall not be a lower stand—no danger—he can't touch me. Somebody'll be after him presently. It's growing late. Two bad we missed our row on the river."

A half hour passed in silence. Anne leaned wearily against the tree trunk, her eyes fixed on the river below. Neal, most uncomfortably astride of a slender branch that bent dangerously under his weight, sincerely wished that it would not be Nathan Fuller who came to their rescue. That bovine youth's contempt for "city fellows" ran deep in the veins of one who had been at the front in college athletics, who had spent a vacation on a Wyoming ranch and learned to ride a bucking bronco.

"You suppose we couldn't make any one bear even if we called over so loud," suggested Anne dubiously. "If Mr. Fuller were only around he might know what to do."

She voiced the thought half consciously and flushed at Neal's snort of contempt.

"Mr. Fuller, even though he has generations of stock raising ancestors behind him, cannot change a maddened bull into a lamb and lead him away by a blue ribbon. Unless the animal's attention is attracted elsewhere or he is captured by strategy I don't see how either of us can get away."

Neal paused and seemed to debate some question within himself. He looked down at the bull.

"What were you going to say?" questioned Anne coldly.

"Merely that I might drop down on the bull's back and thus get him away from your vicinity—that might give you an opportunity to seek assistance from the other side."

"You mean to say that you would jump on the bull's back and thus get him away from your vicinity—that might give you an opportunity to seek assistance from the other side?"

"Yes," replied Neal. "I mean to say that I would jump on the bull's back and thus get him away from your vicinity—that might give you an opportunity to seek assistance from the other side."

YOUR WIFE'S BRIDGE PARTY.

How to Act When You Unexpectedly Blunder In Upon It.

It is inevitable that just once in your life you will make the mistake of coming home early on the night when your wife is entertaining a bridge party. Therefore it is important that you should know how to act on that occasion.

When it dawns upon you that you have blundered into a bridge party do not stand just inside the door twiddling your thumbs and looking embarrassed. Any show of embarrassment will prove what your wife has so often said—that the children get their gawky tendencies from their father's side of the house.

Say "Hello, girls!" as you carelessly toss your hat into a corner. This greeting will please your wife's elderly guests and will make the younger ones about your nerve. While your wife is still gazing her admiration hang your coat on the hatrack, put your hat on the mantel and as you loosen the neckband of your shirt and kick off your shoes ask her where she has often said—that the children get their gawky tendencies from their father's side of the house.

Later don't forget to send your wife a telegram to the effect that you have been called out of town on business and will not be back for a week.

A Case of "Quits."

Clerical Customer (arousing himself from a nap in a barber's chair)—All through, eh?

Barber—Yes, sir; quite some time ago.

Clerical Customer—Indeed! Then I must have been indulging in a quiet nap.

Barber—You surely have, sir.

Clerical Customer—It was certainly very kind of you not to awaken me. The rest has done me good, and I am very thankful to you for what was a most refreshing nap.

Barber—Don't mention it, sir. It's only a fair return. I attended service at your church last Sunday.—London Graphic.

Trade in Cobwebs.

In Europe, especially in France and Germany, cobwebs are not only used in houses but are applied to bottles of wine thought to call for additional evidence of age. The dealer who furnishes cobwebs to the wine sellers has likewise a liquor that softens and colors. Neal had this grip of small revenue and sold quickly down the slippery branch, landing squarely astride of the animal's broad back.

"I suppose we couldn't make any one bear even if we called over so loud," suggested Anne dubiously. "If Mr. Fuller were only around he might know what to do."

She voiced the thought half consciously and flushed at Neal's snort of contempt.

STORY OF MISS HOW'S TEACHING IN TORONTO SLUM.

Aunt Hattie, as She Is Lovingly Called, Now Has a School Named After Her in Recognition of Her Long and Self-Sacrificing Work Among Poor Children—Great Things Have Come of Her Labors.

Before the holidays the Toronto Board of Education changed the name of one of the Toronto schools. What has been known as the Elizabeth Street School will now be called the Hattie How School. Changing a school's name is not an uncommon incident. But behind the changing of this school's name is one of the most inspiring, yet one of the quietest and loveliest annals in Canadian biography.

Miss How's real name is not Hester. Her father called her Hattie when she was a little girl. After having taught in the schools of Toronto for more than twenty years, Miss How is called Aunt Hattie by thousands of people who have come near enough to be drawn into the circle of her influence. Many of these people began to call her Aunt Hattie when they were children. No child who has been taught by Miss How can ever forget her. Once her face has been learned by heart by a child, Miss How becomes a part of the child's life. It is this that has happened that Elizabeth Street School will be known as the Hattie How School.

Miss How was born in Ireland. She was brought to this country by her parents when she was three or four years old. When she was eight years she was entered as a pupil at the Toronto Model School. After professional training was obtained at the Normal School in the same city. Then she became a teacher in the Toronto public schools.

When she was a young teacher Miss How spent several years in Duke Street School, Winchester Street School, and in the same city. At the same time one of Toronto's citizens was the late ex-

Mayor Howland. Going about the city in his attentive, eager, benevolent manner, he was always looking for the children of the poor. He inquired about these boys and was met by the problem of truancy, by the problem of the boy and girl who are difficult to manage, by the problem of the child who is not in regular attendance at the city schools.
